Francesca Quint is best known as a specialist in charity law, an area in which she has been working for the whole of her career to date. Charity law naturally overlaps with distinct areas of law in which Francesca also practises which impinge on the activities of charities. These include education, housing, ecclesiastical law and aspects of public law.

It also extends to those areas which affect people who wish to support charities, such as wills, trusts and tax, in which Francesca is often asked to advise regardless of any specific charity involvement, and where an individual or organisation has a dispute with a charity. In addition, her experience in charity law has led to Francesca being asked to advise comparable organisations which are not charities.

CHARITIES

A good deal of Francesca's work is non-contentious but she often finds herself advising charities in trouble, whether financial, constitutional or regulatory, or acting for one side or another in disputes within, between or involving charities.

Where possible, however, Francesca (herself a trained mediator) tries to assist her clients to find a creative solution which avoids litigation. Her advisory and drafting work has taken her into abstruse areas of many different kinds including toll bridges, fisheries, the exhumation of bodies, foreshore rights and private Acts of Parliament as well as mainstream topics such as the technicalities of company law, the law relating to unincorporated associations and local authority governance issues.

She is equally at home advising charities, clubs, commercial bodies and individuals, and has acted for several clients based in Northern Ireland as well as those in England and in Wales. She is also very flexible in accepting instructions informally as well as in more conventional ways, and apart from instructions from solicitors and other professionals on any of her practice areas is glad to receive direct instructions on charity law matters under the Bar's Public Access Scheme.

Some of Francesca's work of note includes:

- Bangor Provident Trust Limited v Charity Commission for Northern Ireland and another [2015] NICA 21 – Acting in a case concerning charitable status and in particular whether the objects of a housing association are or are not exclusively charitable
- Cifci & Others v Erbil & Others (2012) – Identifying the correct constitution of a charity for the Alevi community
- Re Attorney General's Reference (2012) – Representing the Police Federation on the question of public benefit in charities for the relief or prevention of poverty where there is a restricted class of beneficiaries: further clarification of the law in the light of the ISC case (below)
- R (Independent Schools Council v Charity Commission (NCVO intervening)) (2011) – Representing NCVO in the leading case on the public benefit requirement for independent school charities: The Charity Commission's guidance and the trustees' duties as regards those who cannot afford school fees
- R (Parent Governors of Cardinal Vaughan Memorial School) v Roman Catholic Archbishop of Westminster, CA (2011) – Representing the Archbishop in a dispute over the interpretation of Regulations about the qualifications of Foundation Governors of a voluntary aided school: meaning of 'eligible'

Cases involving litigation in which she has advised on the charity law implications include cases relating to the Church Commissioners and various NHS Foundation Trusts.

Casework of particular interest not involving litigation include advising the trustees of the following charities: The Royal Society, the Royal Hospital Chelsea, Greenwich Hospital, Trinity House, Harrow School, Dulwich College and the Hastings & St Leonards Foreshore Charitable Trust.

Francesca has been keenly involved in the reform of charity law since giving evidence to the Tumim Committee of the NCVO in 2001 – recommending the strengthening of the public benefit test for charities – and has most recently commented in depth on the Law Commission's proposals for technical changes to charity law, a project currently on hold due to Brexit.

Francesca has been an adviser to the National Association of Almshouses since 1989 and over the years has been a trustee of various charities and board member for associated entities.
